Nate Page makes site-specific installations and sculpture to explore our experience of place and the whimsical and hopeful side of civic life. Working in the realm of our everyday environments Page finds metaphors in the relationships between architecture, automobiles, landscape and the body. Using the site's existing material, utility, scale and historical context, Page creates interactive and symbolic Artwork that heightens the experience and perception of place. Page is particularly interested in exploring the power dynamics between mind and body, nature and the man-made, individual and community and uses strategies of everyday construction and absurd relationships to create a poetic artwork that can be both monumental and interactive.
